Great reforms are now in progress, along educational, economical, social and political lines. The opium curse is being eliminated, women are being elevated to their proper place, knowledge is engerly sought and today we are reading daily the successes of a righteous revolution which betoken a patriotism and unity, a healthy desire for progressive rule hitherto unknown to China.

In the establishment of schools for girls and the gradual elevation of the women of China we see the one thing needful to perfect the nation. It is the mother who makes the man. It is the mother's influence that most shapes and controls the life of man. When the mothers of one-third the human race possess in place of ignorance and dark superstition the true light of western religion and knowledge, a new China will be born, and the dawn of this we already see.

Nations are contesting for the open door of commerce in China. To the Christian thurch the door is open wide. No greater opportunity, privilege or duty could come to the people of God in this 26th century than the wonderful invitation of the open door
